Krishan brought home her report card.

She was really happy!
She went to show her mom
who was sitting at her desk.

B

It showed all B's.

She said, "Look! Look! I have all B's!" Her mom said, "Great job, Krishan."

Her little sister, Jeanne said, "Great job big sister!"

Krishan said, "Thanks." But she noticed her mom was holding another report card with Jeanne's name on it.

"You girls did well. Especially,
Jeanne. She got all A's" her Mom said.

Jeanne smiled!

Krishan was disappointed.

She walked to her room, sadly.

Aren't B's okay she thought. She said, "I can get all A's too."

Krishan could hear her mom telling Jeanne, "Since, you made all A's, we are going to take you to get ice cream."

Jeanne leapt with joy! "Yes. Ice cream! Ice cream for me!" Jeanne shouted.

Krishan thought out loud, "I could get all A's if..."

"...her little brother was quiet
when she did study..."

"...if, her little sister didn't need help pouring milk for her cereal all the time!"

"...If, her dad didn't call her to help with chores."

"...If, her mom didn't call her to get things for her all the time."

"...or, the television didn't have such good shows to watch."

Krishan thought out loud,
"Where can I go to study
without something distracting me?"

She went to the kitchen but Jeanne was there.

The next day she came home from school and went into her bedroom but dad was there fixing on something.

So, the next day, she went into her mom's office but her brother was there playing.

It seems like everywhere Krishan went, someone was there. She whispered, "How can I get all A's when I can't find a quiet place to study?"

Then, her mom called out, "Krishan, bring my cellphone to me? Thanks, baby girl."

She dropped her head and went to get her mother's cellphone.

The next day Krishan came home sad. Her dad noticed.

He asked, "Krishan, what's wrong?" She said, "Nothing, dad. Just another day with b's."

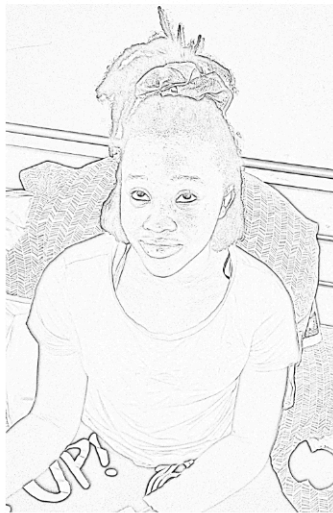

"B's?" Her dad mumbled. As Krishan walked away, her dad realized what the problem was. "Yes, another day with b's. Yes, baby girl, b's."

For the next week, everyday Krishan came home from school, it was quiet.

Her mother rarely called her name.

Her dad did all his chores quietly and by himself. And, her little brother was never in the same room while she studied.

A month later, Krishan came in skipping and yelling, "I got all A's! I got all A's!"

Then, Jeanne jubilantly screamed, "I got all A's, too!"

They smiled and sang out, "We got all A's! We got all A's!" As the girls danced and waved their grade cards, dad looked on.

WAKE UP!

"Good job girls." Dad said.

"No more B's Krishan!" Mom said as she
winked at dad.
